$100,000 Bonds Set For 4 Top U.S. Commies

Fifth Arrested As FBI Rounds Up Leaders In West Coast Region

DENVER (AP)—U. S. Commissioner Joseph D. Neff set bond at $100,000 each for four top Communists nabbed together only one block from the Colorado Capitol building by FBI agents. A fifth was arrested in Los Angeles.

Three men and a woman were taken by FBI agents to city jail here for fingerprinting, then to the county jail. Commissioner Neff said a preliminary hearing would be held Aug. 16.

The arrest of the four along with that of Mrs. Patricia Blau in Los Angeles, was bound on warrants charging them with violation of the Smith Act.

That law, under which a total of 115 Communist party functionaries have been arrested since 1949, makes it a crime to teach or advocate the forcible overthrow of the U. S. government.

Those arrested here were Arthur Bary, 42, chairman of the Colorado Communist Party and regional organizer for Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, Utah and New Mexico; Anna Correa Bary, 29, his wife and former organizer of the Communist party in Denver; Harold Zepelin, 28, Communist party organizer for Colorado; and Lewis Martin Johnson, 34, head of the Communist party in Utah.

As THEY LEFT the office of Commissioner Neff, all except Mrs. Bary smartly dressed in a blue dress and sporting a boyish Italian bardo, were handcuffed.

Asked if he had any comment, Bary, nattily dressed in white straw hat, dark blue suit and white polo shirt, told newsmen:

"I think you should know that Commissioner Neff set bond at $100,000 each, which is tantamount to no bond at all. It will be impossible to meet it."

Neff said the four showed no

Franklin County's Judge Randall Dies

COLUMBUS (AP)—Franklin County Common Pleas Judge Cecil J. Randall, 68, died in his home here today after a long illness.

Judge Randall had been in ill health for several years, but had not sat on the bench regularly since last September.

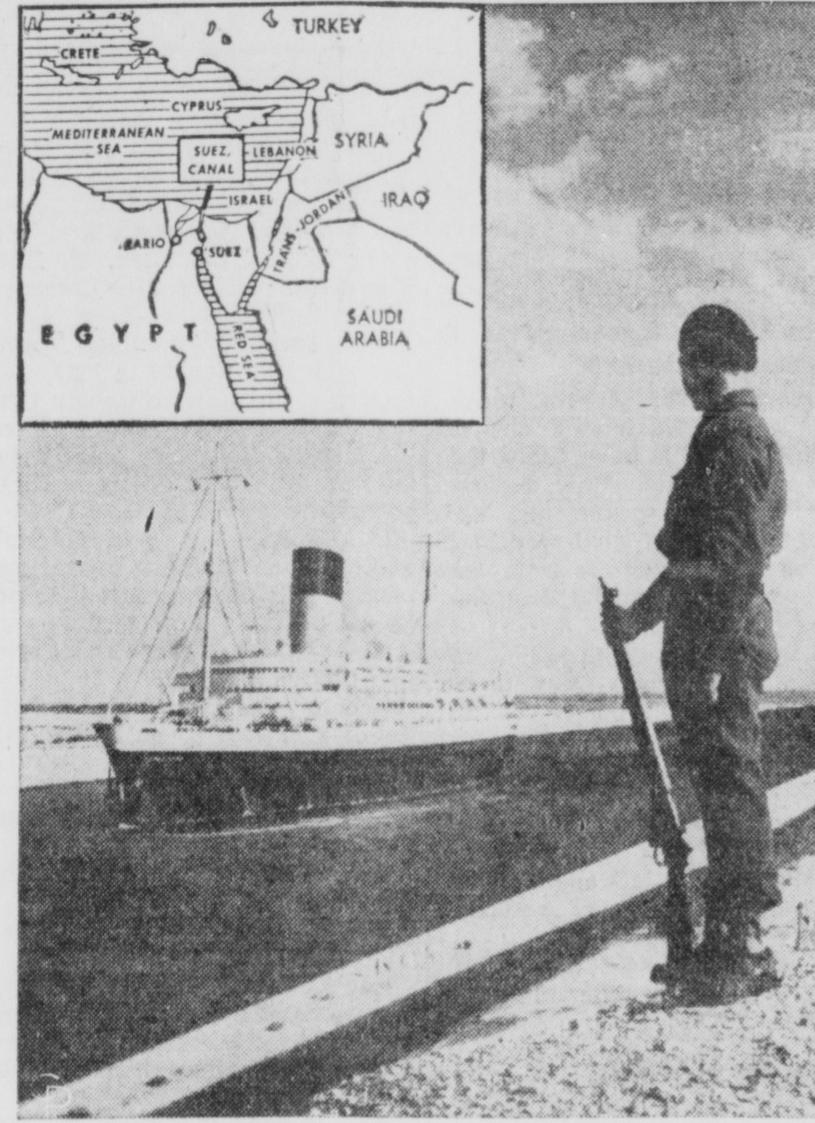

He was born on a farm in Jackson County and was graduated by Ohio State University in 1911. He was first elected to the common pleas court bench in 1930. He was reelected to full six-year terms in 1932, 1938, 1944 and 1950.

He is the second Republican common pleas judge to die here in the last 19 months. Judge John R. King died in January 1953.

Dog Law Revision, Ban On Late Eating Spots Up For Final Vote

Two potent measures will be up for final action when city council meets Tuesday night, one dealing with stray dogs and the other with late-night eating places.

The ordinances have the makings for renewed debate, but reports Monday appeared to indicate growing opposition to both proposals. This, however, did not rule out a late swing in sentiment on the part of the public—and the municipal lawmakers.

Along with other measures to come before council in its first August session, the ordinance to tighten the city's stray dog law will be up for third reading. Discussion on the measure at council's last meeting became heated.

The ordinance would, in effect, make year-round the city's present Summertime crackdown on stray dogs. Under present law, the owners or custodians of dogs found roaming in the city between March and October can be fined. More than two dozen persons have paid penalties this summer.

Rainfall, Crop Report For County Area

All crops continue to show the effects of lack of moisture and high heat. The degree of damage varies in the county, depending upon the amount of rainfall over the past two months, soil type, organic matter content in the soil and fertility program.

There is little if any corn in the county that is not shortened in height because of lack of moisture and excessive heat. Many farmers who have been carrying out a cropping program that contains two years of meadow and pasture, now plan to maintain their old sod next year because their new meadow is a failure.

This appears to be economical and practical thing to do especially if the old sod is containing a good legume grass mixture. If one must have a meadow next year where the new seed has failed this spring prepare a seed bed now and seed a legume-grass mixture by the band method as soon as soil moisture is adequate to germinate seeds and grow young plants.

Further declines in farm prices are expected as more livestock and livestock products come to the market and government price-support levels are lowered.

Consumers can expect little benefit, however, from these lower farm prices unless recent tendencies to increase marketing and processing charges are curbed.

A somewhat less pessimistic view, from the housewives' standpoint, came yesterday from the Agriculture Department, which said major foods will be in plentiful supply during the remaining months of 1954 and that prices should ease some.

THE DEPARTMENT forecasts a heavier output of pork, veal, lard, turkeys, eggs, processed fruits, fresh vegetables and some rice, as compared with the same months last year. The department said lamb and mutton are the only major items which will be scarcer than last year.

The average person, the department said, probably will eat a little more during 1954 than he did in 1953.

The department reported last Friday a drop in prices received by farmers during the month ending July 15, the second straight month that farm prices declined. The price index, based on 1910-14 averages, stood at 247 compared with 260 in July last year.

Grocery Prices Remain High Despite Farm Income Drop

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House Agriculture Committee formally reported today what housewives already knew: grocery prices remain at near-record highs despite a drop in farm prices.

Making public a statistical study of the trend in farm prices and retail food costs, the committee concluded:

"Thus far, almost none of the lower prices received by farmers since 1951 has been passed on to consumers in the form of lower retail food costs."

"Further declines in farm prices are expected as more livestock and livestock products come to the market and government price-support levels are lowered."

In contrast, the committee noted, "retail food prices now hold within a fraction of their 1952 peak."

The committee said housewives now are paying the "highest prices on record" for bakery products and cereals, although farm prices for wheat are down to 1949 levels.

McNICHOLS said Vice President Nixon should appoint the six members of what he called the "select" committee and added that it should report back to the Senate "as equity would permit."

The move was not entirely unexpected although Knowland had said yesterday he expected a vote on a censure resolution to be taken in the "next day or two."

Last week, however, Sen. J. Alexander Smith (R-N.J.) suggested that a six-man bipartisan committee be named to look into the "good or evil of McCarthyism," but he wanted no report until February — after the November elections.

This morning Sen. McClellan (D-Dark) suggested that a special Senate committee be named to draft formal and specific charges against McCarthy. But he specified that a Senate vote be taken before the current session of Congress adjourns — before election.

McClellan termed it a "better procedure" in his view than others advanced so far, but said he is not committed to it and would go along "if a better one is suggested."

McClellan is the senior Democrat on McCarthy's Senate Investigations Subcommittee, and the man to whom many Democrats look for quarterbacking on issues involving McCarthy.

McClellan said the resolution by Sen. Flanders (R-Vt.) to censure McCarthy is not specific.

"I'm not passing final judgment on whether he should be censured," McClellan said of the Wisconsin senator.

But if the Senate does bring a censure resolution to a vote, he said, it should be a resolution containing specific accusations giving the defendant "a fair opportunity to enter a defense."

ANY SENATOR who is censured should have specific charges to answer, and the Flanders resolution does not now meet that test," McClellan said, adding:

"I think the better procedure would be to have a committee vote out specific charges at this session of Congress."

He said he thought it would be wise to assign such a task to some special committee of senators from both parties "who have had the least to do" with rows involving McCarthy.

He said he has made his views known, and that he feels "the question is now strictly up to the public—whatever the public wants." Several dog owners challenged his views at the last meeting.

Commenting on the final vote expected Tuesday on the ordinance, Wallace said:

A somewhat less pessimistic view, from the housewives' standpoint, came yesterday from the Agriculture Department, which said major foods will be in plentiful supply during the remaining months of 1954 and that prices should ease some.

More and more as the growth of Circleville gains momentum in the heart of Pickaway County, local residents have turned to a study of the district's rich historical chapters.

Never before in the range of memory, many school teachers say, has there been such enthusiastic interest in the story of the area's earliest years. And among the adults this has been especially true of the new families recently drawn here from other sections of the nation.

Many of the finest historical collections—both museum pieces and scrap-book clippings—have been built up by local residents. And many more are in the making.

To assist this worthy hobby, a strong stimulus for civic spirit, The Herald has made special arrangements for the district's foremost historical authority to write a column at frequent intervals. Mac Noggle of Circleville, who has specialized in probing deep into the countless and colorful stories of the district's yesterdays, will pass along his interesting findings to The Herald's readers.

The seven lines, showing increases, included groceries, general stores, men's clothing, motor vehicle dealers, filling stations and building materials dealers.

The bureau said lines with sales declines were florists, jewelry, furniture and hardware stores and heating and plumbing equipment dealers.

Covering the surface of the grain with a canvas or tarpaulin immediately following treatment will probably improve results. Close entrance to the bin tight and keep closed from 36 to 48 hours. The bin can then be opened and should be left open for sometime before entering.

"Roundabout Retrospect" will offer young and old the makings of a scrap-book which can become a priceless treasure through family generations. It will give school children a better understanding and appreciation of the area in which they live. And for the average reader, who may at times become weary with the restless headlines of the present, it will open the door for relaxed and informative wanderings far into the local past.

Needed RH negative blood from Pfc. John Sliva, 24, of Little Rock, Ark., was given yesterday to the 4-pound 4-ounce daughter of Mrs. Haru Yamakawa, 30. Born with RH positive blood, the baby was in "very dangerous condition" before her blood was replaced, said Dr. Mitsuo Yokoyama.

Friday night an apparently doomed "RH" boy of Mrs. Scalise Suzuki was saved by blood donated by Cpl. John R. Donelson of Ashland, Ohio, and Pfc. Paul E. Bower of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Soils and crops in all parts of the county are in need of continued rain and cooler weather. The country corn crop is definitely hurt now, we do not expect the yields of last year in most areas of the county.

Grocery Prices Remain High Despite Farm Income Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Agriculture Committee formally reported today what housewives already knew: grocery prices remain at near-record highs despite a drop in farm prices.

The department reported last Friday a drop in prices received by farmers during the month ending July 15, the second straight month that farm prices declined.

The farmer receives 44 cents, of which 30 cents meets the cost of producing his crop, the report stated, and concluded:

"Thus, the farmer and his family have about 14 cents out of each consumer dollar spent for domestically produced food for their work and their investment."

The House committee found that the farmer's share of the consumer dollar is steadily dropping "while retail food prices have remained at 1952 peak levels."

It said that out of each dollar spent by the American housewife for foods, 56 cents goes for processing, marketing and transportation charges.

Local Unit 4th In Ohio Legion Championship

Fourth place in the Ohio American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps Championship was awarded to Circleville's Hall-Adkins Post 134 Saturday.

The competition, held at Xavier University in Cincinnati, was won by Massillon in what was described as a "surprise" by other competing corps. The winners totaled 80.833 points.

In second place was Bellefontaine with 80.663 points. The 1953 champs were penalized a full point for failure to leave the field on time, according to reports. The penalty cost them the championship.

Forrestville was third with 73.083 points while Circleville received 70.733 points. The local unit here has been third the past several years.

IN FIFTH position was Marion, Toledo was sixth, Martins Ferry was seventh and Dayton eighth.

Circleville's next scheduled competition is Aug. 15 at Bellefontaine. On Aug. 22 they play host at their "Colorama of Music" at the high school football field.

Rehabilitation Of Vets Eyed By Legion

CINCINNATI (AP) — Rehabilitation of disabled veterans is the most important work facing the American Legion today, says James Waggoner, new commander of the Legion.

"We are determined that the people of Ohio and the United States never forget or shirk their responsibilities for the fellows who have been disabled and diseased because of service to their country," he said.

This is not a help yourself program but one dedicated to helping those who cannot help themselves, said Waggoner, 34, a Lancaster real estate dealer.

He said he hoped his administration will create an even stronger American Legion.

Waggoner was a gunner on a B24 bomber during World War II. He joined Fairfield Post No. 11 in Lancaster, the same post his father had belonged to before he died in 1942, soon after he was discharged from the Air Corps in 1945.

Other new officers are Philip Lustig of Cleveland, first vice commander; Fred Thacker of Marion, second vice commander; William Collins of Mentor, treasurer; the Rev. Joseph Buckley, Shaker Heights, chaplain, and Clarence Whittemeyer, Louisville, National executive committee member.

The three-day convention ended yesterday with a two-hour parade. Twenty-six drum and bugle corps, including the state champions from Massillon, and 11 bands, including the state champions from Salem, marched and strutted. The Canton post was named as the best appearing band and the Bellefontaine drum and bugle corps was selected the best appearing in that class.

Local Blood Program To Plan Ahead

An organizational meeting to gear the Pickaway County Red Cross blood program for the next six months will be held Monday at 8 p. m. in the Methodist Church.

The gathering will be public, and all those interested in the program are invited to attend. A sudden, new public interest in the program several months ago turned it into one of the most effective in the state. Previously, interest had lagged to an extent that termination of the program here was under consideration.

Monday night's meeting will be held to make replacements in key jobs, in the Circleville setup and elsewhere throughout the county. A number of volunteers who teamed their efforts so successfully last January agreed at that time only to serve for a six-month period.

Much of the program's outstanding success through the first half of 1954 has been attributed to a smooth-working rural organization, closely coordinated with headquarters in Circleville.

World Today

WASHINGTON (P) — The witness who cites the Fifth Amendment and clams up — one of the biggest stumbling blocks to Congress' investigation of communism—may remain a stumbling block.

Atty. Gen. Brownell offered a solution: pass a law to make a Fifth Amendment witness talk by promising him immunity from federal prosecution. There is no such law yet.

And if Congress did pass such a law — in the short time it has left this year — the Supreme Court might throw it out as an unconstitutional device to get around the Constitution's Fifth Amendment.

For years Congress has been helpless when a witness asked about Communist connections, says: "I stand on the Fifth Amendment and refuse an answer on the ground it might incriminate me."

The amendment says among other things that a man can't be forced to give testimony against himself. But, since there's no crime in just being a Communist, how can a witness say he might incriminate himself?

He can argue that someday the government might want to prosecute him under the Smith Act, passed in 1940, which makes it a crime, not to be a Communist, but to teach forcible overthrow of the government.

The government already has tried, convicted and jailed a number of Communists under the Smith Act and, undoubtedly, it is far from through bringing others to trial.

The actual words a witness used in answering a congressional committee could never be used against him later at a trial. But his words might provide leads to evidence on which the government could try him as a Smith Act violator.

Brownell suggested:

1. A law under which the attorney general — Brownell or his successors — could promise a witness he'd never be prosecuted for any offense in relation to which he answered committee questions.

Thus a Communist, once he was guaranteed immunity, could answer questions even to the extent of teaching forcible overthrow and never afterwards be prosecuted for violating the Smith Act.

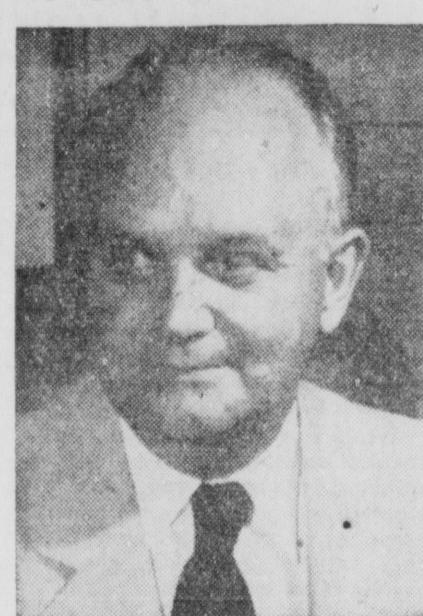

2. The attorney general alone should have the right to decide who should, and shouldn't, be granted immunity as an inducement to talk. Brownell's reasoning on that point goes like this:

As chief law enforcement officer the attorney general is always in a better position to know, in the case of any individual witness, whether the public interest is better served by granting him immunity from a future prosecution.

3. Once a witness was promised immunity he could no longer use the Fifth Amendment as an excuse for not answering. Since that amendment was intended to protect a man against being forced to incriminate himself, a promise of immunity would make the protection of the Fifth Amendment unnecessary.

The argument is that if a witness, after receiving a guarantee of immunity, still refused to testify he could be jailed for contempt of

"We in the Department of Agriculture look upon the Ohio State Fair as one of the oldest and most effective educational activities in our great State," A. L. Sorenson, director of agriculture, points out in urging Ohioans to attend the annual exposition, in Columbus Aug. 27-Sept. 3.

In planning this year's fair and in the future, we have not lost sight of this basic purpose. Plans have been initiated to make the State Fair more effective in spreading information, and to more adequately mirror the changing pattern of rural and urban life.

"In the years ahead we want to make sure that the Ohio State Fair reflects to a maximum degree the relative importance of the various enterprises and services of this state. Ohio is one of the leading states agriculturally and industrially, and it shall be our purpose to have the Ohio State Fair portray its full significance."

Congress. The first witness who spurned immunity, still refused under the Fifth Amendment to answer questions, and was jailed for contempt, would no doubt take his case to court.

The court then would have to rule on whether Congress could pass a law to get around a constitutional amendment. The court might rule, for example, that the law was invalid because it could not grant immunity from prosecution in state courts.

In Congress there was mixed reaction to Brownell's proposal. Some members said that letting the attorney general decide who got immunity was too much power for one man. Someday an attorney general might use it for bad purposes.

The Senate last year passed a bill which would let Congress, not the attorney general, have final say on who gets immunity.

Last week, after sitting on the problem a year, the House Judiciary Committee approved a bill similar to the Senate bill. Although it says a federal judge would grant the immunity, not Congress, it would actually be Congress which recommended when and to whom to do the granting.

But there was this difference: while the Senate bill would make it possible to give immunity to anyone involved in any kind of crime, the House committee bill would limit the immunity guarantee to subservient cases only.

Even if the House should pass this bill before it quits, there could be no law on the subject unless House and Senate worked out their differences. There isn't much time left for that.

'Father Mac' Ending 30th Year Of Servitude To Sioux Indians

By HAL BOYLE

PINE RIDGE S. D. (P) — "I always like the spirit of these people."

In this simple sentence the Rev. Stephen E. McNamara, who calls himself an "ecclesiastical hobo," sums up 30 years of service to the American Indian.

To thousands of Indians here on the largest reservation of the Sioux nation, the Jesuit priest, now in his 80th year, is known as "Sina Sapa" or "Black Blanket," from the color of his cassock. Others affectionately call him "the father from the blue cloudland."

For more than a quarter of a century "Father Mac" has baptized them, married them and buried them. In the Holy Rosary Mission School he has labored mightily to teach their children white man's lore to make them self-sufficient, the love of God to make them happy.

Like most people who come to know American Indians well, Father Mac has a deep respect for them and a protective feeling toward them.

His fine blue eyes harden and an indignant note creeps into his soft voice when he speaks of those he feels expect the Indians to progress at a rate beyond their ability.

"No people in all history have moved up from a savage status to modern civilization in one generation," he said. "It will take time."

"It seems to me it is the policy of the government now to write them off, and they are not ready yet. It will be a long time before the Indian will be able to compete on equal terms in the white man's world, particularly the way the white man's world is going now."

"Why, there are still Indians alive who virtually were born in the stone age and yet they have grandchildren in college."

Father Mac has a feeling of real sympathy for the tug of war going on in the soul of a nomad people such as the Sioux, as they try to buckle down to the anchored life and steady habits of their white conquerors. "The Sioux are very intelligent people," he said "but their theme song always has been 'Don't Fence Me In.' They'd still in their hearts rather be out on the range hunting the buffalo."

WASHINGTON (P) — The witness who cites the Fifth Amendment and claims up — one of the biggest stumbling blocks to Congress' investigation of communism — may remain a stumbling block.

Atty. Gen. Brownell offered a solution: pass a law to make a Fifth Amendment witness talk by promising him immunity from federal prosecution. There is no such law yet.

And if Congress did pass such a law — in the short time it has left this year — the Supreme Court might throw it out as an unconstitutional device to get around the Constitution's Fifth Amendment.

For years Congress has been helpless when a witness asked about Communist connections, says: "I stand on the Fifth Amendment and refuse an answer on the ground it might incriminate me."

The amendment says among other things that a man can't be forced to give testimony against himself. But, since there's no crime in just being a Communist, how can a witness say he might incriminate himself?

He can argue that someday the government might want to prosecute him under the Smith Act, passed in 1940, which makes it a crime, not to be a Communist, but to teach forcible overthrow of the government.

The government already has tried, convicted and jailed a number of Communists under the Smith Act and, undoubtedly, it is far from through bringing others to trial.

The actual words a witness used in answering a congressional committee could never be used against him later at a trial. But his words might provide leads to evidence on which the government could try him as a Smith Act violator.

Brownell suggested:

1. A law under which the attorney general — Brownell or his successors — could promise a witness he'd never be prosecuted for any offense in relation to which he answered committee questions.

Thus a Communist, once he was guaranteed immunity, could answer questions even to the extent of teaching forcible overthrow and never afterwards be prosecuted for violating the Smith Act.

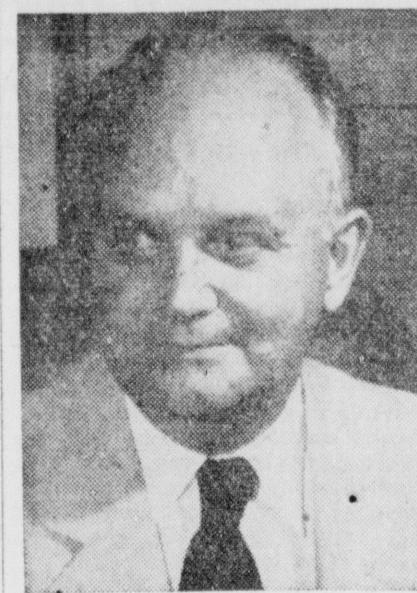

2. The attorney general alone should have the right to decide who should, and shouldn't, be granted immunity as an inducement to talk. Brownell's reasoning on that point goes like this:

As chief law enforcement officer the attorney general is always in a better position to know, in the case of any individual witness, whether the public interest is better served by granting him immunity from a future prosecution.

3. Once a witness was promised immunity he could no longer use the Fifth Amendment as an excuse for not answering. Since that amendment was intended to protect a man against being forced to incriminate himself, a promise of immunity would make the protection of the Fifth Amendment unnecessary.

The argument is that if a witness, after receiving a guarantee of immunity, still refused to testify he could be jailed for contempt of

THAILAND NEXT?

AFTER THE REDS have consolidated their gains in Indochina, Thailand will be under severe pressure. Already the ground is being laid by Communist infiltration. The United States is rapidly increasing its military and technical aid to the country formerly known as Siam. This may include air bases.

As U. S. ambassador, William J. (Wild Bill) Donovan has labored mightily to stiffen Thailand resistance. But the Siamese will be handicapped in trying to prevent infiltration from Burma on the west and Indochina on the east.

There have been many warnings over the years that the fall of Indochina would put Thailand in a perilous position. Independent for many centuries, it would be a rich prize for the Reds as a producer of rice, rubber and tin.

Thailand has been staunchly anti-Communist. In 1951 it voted in the United Nations to label Red China an aggressor and sent troops to Korea. Recently Thailand has been striving unsuccessfully for a special session of the UN General Assembly to take up the threat of Red China in Southeast Asia.

Thailand is a land the West cannot afford to lose. Its people certainly deserve a better fate than Red enslavement. Its hope is in an awakening of those Western nations which now seem to be too Munich-minded to worry about Red gains in the cold war.

A JOB FOR CONGRESS

WHEN THE NEXT session of Congress convenes, one of its first tasks should be to rush through a bill to outlaw the award of $179,420 in "back pay" to 11 United Nations employees who refused to say whether they were Communists.

Rep. Dwight Rogers of Florida introduced a bill to that effect but it was lost in the shuffle of the closing days of the 1954 session.

The "International Court of Justice" recently voted the money — pay for the months that have intervened since they were dropped from the payroll, and during which they did no work—to the 11 Americans who refused to answer questions by the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee. The "court" also decreed that the 11 should be rehired by the UN!

If this "court" is some sort of trap into which the United States fell or was pushed, Congress should immediately take whatever steps are necessary to rectify the error.

George E. Sokolsky's These Days

During the visit of Chou En-lai to India, in June, many banquets were held at which many speeches were delivered. The keynote was peace and it was stressed that China and India had been at peace for 2,000 years, which excludes the conquest of India by the descendants of Genghis Khan, who was a Mongol and not a Chinese and therefore what seems to be an historic inaccuracy becomes a matter of interpretation. Also nothing is said about the Chinese conquest of Nepal and Tibet, which, while not directly Indian territory, did involve India in troublesome situations with China.

Nehru waxed very enthusiastic about peace, saying this:

"Peace is necessary for the entire world and peace is indivisible today. But in Asia peace is even more vital and necessary than elsewhere, for we have to build our nations and we want to utilize all our energies in the task of construction and not of destruction. There are divisions and differences in the world, but there is also a sense of unity and of growing oneness. I earnestly trust that our minds will be directed toward this growing feeling of oneness and to the pursuit and realization of the common ideals that animate humanity today instead of laying stress on divisions and differences."

"Recently India and China came to agreement . . . and . . . we have laid down certain principles which . . . are recognition of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of each country, of mutual noninterference with each other's internal affairs, of equality and mutual benefit and peaceful coexistence."

However, nothing was said either by Chou En-lai or by Nehru on the subject of Red China's invasion of Korea or Indochina or the conquest of Tibet by the Soviet Universal State, or of the absorption of Mongolia and Tanna Tuva into the Soviet system. Apparently the oneness of Asia is to be achieved by the piece-meal reduction of Asiatic countries by the Kremlin until nothing is left in freedom but India.

Precisely how is self-determination achieved by substituting Soviet Russia as a colonial master for France? This is, in effect, what has now happened in Northern Indochina, as the two major representatives of the Soviet Universal State, Molotov and Chou En-lai, made clear by their conduct.

It must have been a real unpleasantness for those who believe that Soviet Russia and Red China will split up to witness the absolute oneness of Molotov and Chou En-lai, the oneness of the Soviet Universal State, the discipline of the Korean and Indochinese delegates and their submission to the higher authority. It must have shattered their hopes, particularly the hopes of Anthony Eden, that once the West showed Chou En-lai how gentlemen act, he would become a gentleman.

I knew Chou when he was a young fellow in Tientsin where I worked on a newspaper and I have never doubted that he would not change his course the moment he gazed upon the handsome features of Anthony Eden. His is a conviction and faith that knows no turning. At any rate, two of Red

CAIRO—The Egyptian people and government are violently anti-Communist, notwithstanding their feud with England over the Suez Canal and their resentment of Truman's policy of extreme friendship to Israel.

Although this land of the Pharaohs stands at the bridgehead of three continents, and is a vital sector in the cold war, it has nothing much in the way of soldiers and weapons to back up its support of the West.

Egyptians are very friendly to the American people, which is true of most nations in the Middle East, even though they disagree with certain of the Truman and Eisenhower policies.

It is evident in the hotels, in the bazaars and on the streets. Bellhops, clerks and police officials ask, "Are you American?", and grin broadly when the reply is in the affirmative. It is surprising how many have visited "the States," or have relatives and friends there.

BARGAINING — The bargaining and sparring match between Egypt and Britain over the military control of the vital Suez Canal—a link between Britain and her erstwhile Empire—has ended, with U. S. Ambassador Jefferson Caffrey siding with

Prime Minister Churchill under specific orders from Washington.

Prior to the pact, agreed upon a week ago, Churchill professed to be alarmed over Egypt's recent purchase of $3 million worth of small arms from Spain, especially as they involved the type of guns and mortars peculiarly adapted to the guerrilla warfare which the natives have waged against the British in outlying posts along the Nile and the Mediterranean.

However, the Egyptian insisted they had bought the guns and mortars simply to strengthen their bargaining position vis-a-vis Britain. According to the agreement now entered into by the two nations, Britain will be able to maintain a great air and military base about 150 miles northeast of Cairo.

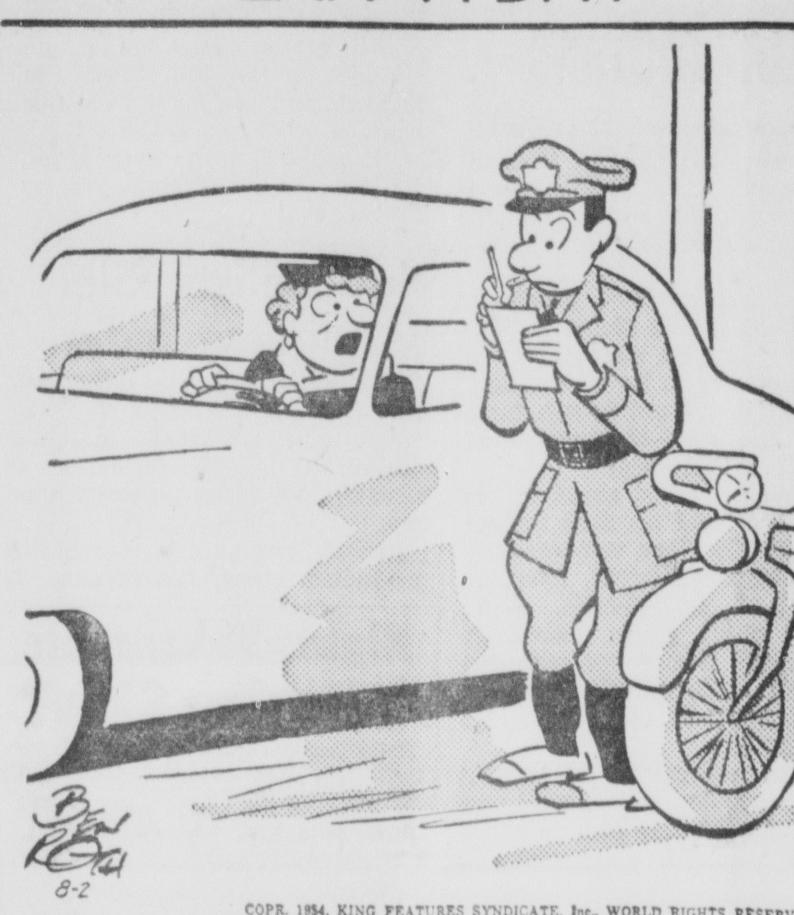

The British will have 20 months in which to withdraw their 80,000 troops, whose presence to the Egyptians of the anti-Farouk revolution—July, 1952—made their country seem like one that was occupied by a foreign power.

The British will staff the area with technicians garbed as civilians. But they, and, of course, the Americans, will be permitted to move in and use this only great armament and repair center in the whole of the Middle East if Moscow or Peiping should threaten to invade this territory.

According to the pact England may occupy the base for seven

Insect Pests of Summer

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

WARM weather and sunshine bring with them the annoyance and, at times, even danger, of insect bites. These pests may cause economic loss, illness, and even death.

They transmit such diseases as malaria and typhus, and many lesser disturbances.

Common Insect Types

There are many types of insects that cause damage to man. These include spiders, ticks, mites, lice, fleas, flies, mosquitoes, bees, wasps, hornets, scorpions, as well as moths and caterpillars.

An insect bite injures the skin by the penetration of the bite or suck. However, the greatest reaction to the bite is caused by the injection of the insect's salivary fluid. This may often contain toxic material, as with the bite of the black widow spider.

Victims Desensitized

Certain people, after prolonged exposure to insect bites, actually become desensitized or immune to them, due to being exposed to larger and larger doses.

Controlled by Repellents

Of course, the number of insects in certain areas can be controlled by the use of repellents. There are many effective ones available for use on the body itself.

Most insect bites will disappear by themselves in time. However, if a person, particularly a child, is bitten regularly, it is best to consult a physician. Many bites on a young person may prove to be dangerous.

The Egyptians, and they are representative of the Arab world, do not appreciate the Eisenhower-Dulles ultimatum of "massive retaliation," or our demands for new anti-Russian alliances, like that proposed for Southeast Asia.

A flat and expansive area extremely vulnerable to air and armored attack, as Rommel demonstrated when he almost reached the gates of Alexandria, some 180 miles northwest of Cairo, they want no part in another world war.

TRADERS—Another consideration which American diplomats should paste in their hats is that most of the so-called neutrals in the cold war delight to bargain. They think a man—or a nation—is dull and slow-witted; if he or it sets forth real, honest aims in opening parleys and statements.

Exaggeration and a bombast are to be expected in the initial approach to any problem, then to be followed by serious trading. These are ancient and historic lands. After 4,000 years of strife, the Sphinx still smiles.

In other words, Asian, Oriental and South American diplomats delight to haggle beyond the point of American charity or endurance. The British understand that old vice, or virtue. The Americans have yet to grasp and take advantage of this bazaar mentality.

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX CYNTHIA knew that Elizabeth was right. The show must go on—that was the way Norman would want it. So his mother and the girl he loved must hold their heads high and smile.

Across the room, Walt's glance met hers; he had noticed her absence. And he must have noticed, too, the change that had taken place within her.

The guests were laughing at the antics of some comedian; one of them leaned over to tell Cynthia that the pledges were continuing to be phoned in—thousands of dollars had been raised.

When he could manage, during time out for the customary station break, Walt came over to Cynthia and drew up a chair beside hers. In a low voice, he told her that he thought she should be laughing.

"You won't come with me?" he asked, his eyes looking into hers questioningly, yet as though he had already read the answer in her lovely face. "I can't persuade you to come?"

"No," she said. "You might as well know, Walt—I have to wait for Norman."

She saw no reason not to tell him as forthrightly as she could. For there remained no uncertainty in her heart or mind. She admired and respected Walt, but she realized now that she could never have been happy married to him. She could not have been satisfied with that half-ton, that small niche.

Even if Norman should not come back to her—though this thought she refused to accept—she couldn't ever marry Walt. And although he might feel some disappointment, some hurt to his masculine vanity, Walt would get over it. For his work always would come first.

He had not said anything for a long moment. His eyes had continued to look into hers. Then he said gravely, "I see. That's the way it is."

"It's too bad," Walt was saying, making an obvious effort to be a good loser, "that Norman couldn't get back for the benefit and to be with you this evening."

"But he is back!" Cynthia cried, her voice almost catching in the tightness of her throat. For, straining her eyes into the darkness,

"You've come home," Cynthia said.

"Yes, I've come home—and so have you, my sweet," Norman said.

outside the circle of light that enclosed them, she saw that it was Norman who had come in the car.

Now he was coming toward her, taking the steps that led to the wide piazza two at a time. She could not wait for him to reach her. She was as eager as he. She ran forward to greet him, to welcome him home—to throw her arms around him and hold him tightly so that, without words, Norman would know all that this home-coming meant.

She forgot that Walt stood there, watching them. She did not notice when he walked slowly down the steps, past them, and on toward his car. She did not even hear the motor when it started, or see Walt drive away alone. Yet not alone, for the young doctor knew in his own heart that Cynthia was right. His work did mean more to him than any woman ever could. It was his life. He was dedicated to it. He had loved a young nurse who assisted him in his work because he needed her for that purpose.

This was the way it was meant to be. There was no doubt of that in Norman's thoughts. He had known it from the minute that bolt of lightning had hit him; when he had seen Cynthia holding an injured child in her arms so tenderly. He had known that somehow she would know it too.

He did not have to ask her how it had come about. She had promised she would let him know, when it did. Her arms outstretched to him, her eager, running feet, the glory of her face, her shining eyes and parted lips—all these told him.

"You've come home," Cynthia said.

"Yes, I've come home—and so have you, my sweet," Norman said.

THAILAND NEXT?

AFTER THE REDS have consolidated their gains in Indochina, Thailand will be under severe pressure. Already the ground is being laid by Communist infiltration. The United States is rapidly increasing its military and technical aid to the country formerly known as Siam. This may include air bases.

As U. S. ambassador, William J. (Wild Bill) Donovan has labored mightily to stiffen Thailand resistance. But the Siamese will be handicapped in trying to prevent infiltration from Burma on the west and Indochina on the east.

There have been many warnings over the years that the fall of Indochina would put Thailand in a perilous position. Independent for many centuries, it would be a rich prize for the Reds as a producer of rice, rubber and tin.

Thailand has been staunchly anti-Communist. In 1951 it voted in the United Nations to label Red China an aggressor and sent troops to Korea. Recently Thailand has been striving unsuccessfully for a special session of the UN General Assembly to take up the threat of Red China in Southeast Asia.

Thailand is a land the West cannot afford to lose. Its people certainly deserve a better fate than Red enslavement. Its hope is in an awakening of those Western nations which now seem to be too Munich-minded to worry about Red gains in the cold war.

A JOB FOR CONGRESS

WHEN THE NEXT session of Congress convenes, one of its first tasks should be to rush through a bill to outlaw the award of $179,420 in "back pay" to 11 United Nations employees who refused to say whether they were Communists.

Rep. Dwight Rogers of Florida introduced a bill to that effect but it was lost in the shuffle of the closing days of the 1954 session.

The "International Court of Justice" recently voted the money—pay for the months that have intervened since they were dropped from the payroll, and during which they did no work—to the 11 Americans who refused to answer questions by the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee. The "court" also decreed that the 11 should be rehired by the UN!

If this "court" is some sort of trap into which the United States fell or was pushed, Congress should immediately take whatever steps are necessary to rectify the error.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

During the visit of Chou En-lai to India, in June, many banquets were held at which many speeches were delivered. The keynote was peace and it was stressed that China and India had been at peace for 2,000 years, which excludes the conquest of India by the descendants of Genghis Khan, who was a Mongol and not a Chinese and therefore what seems to be an historic inaccuracy becomes a matter of interpretation. Also nothing is said about the Chinese conquest of Nepal and Tibet, which, while not directly Indian territory, did involve India in troublesome situations with China.

Nehru waxed very enthusiastic about peace, saying this:

"Peace is necessary for the entire world and peace is indivisible today. But in Asia peace is even more vital and necessary than elsewhere, for we have to build our nations and we want to utilize all our energies in the task of construction and not of destruction. There are divisions and differences in the world, but there is also a sense of unity and of growing oneness. I earnestly trust that our minds will be directed toward this growing feeling of oneness and to the pursuit and realization of the common ideals that animate humanity today instead of laying stress on divisions and differences."

"Recently India and China came to agreement...we have laid down certain principles which...are recognition of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of each country, of mutual noninterference with each other's internal affairs, of equality and mutual benefit and peaceful coexistence."

However, nothing was said either by Chou En-lai or by Nehru on the subject of Red China's invasion of Korea or Indochina or the conquest of Tibet by the Soviet Universal State, or of the absorption of Mongolia and Tanna Tuva into the Soviet system. Apparently the oneness of Asia is to be achieved by the piece-meal reduction of Asiatic countries by the Kremlin until nothing is left in freedom but India.

Precisely how is self-determination achieved by substituting Soviet Russia as a colonial master for France? This is, in effect, what has now happened in Northern Indochina, as the two major representatives of the Soviet Universal State, Molotov and Chou En-lai, made clear by their conduct.

It must have been a real unpleasantness for those who believe that Soviet Russia and Red China will split up to witness the absolute oneness of Molotov and Chou En-lai, the oneness of the Soviet Universal State, the discipline of the Korean and Indochinese delegates and their submission to the higher authority. It must have shattered their hopes, particularly the hopes of Anthony Eden, that once the West showed Chou En-lai how gentlemen act, he would become a gentleman.

I knew Chou when he was a young fellow in Tientsin where I worked on a newspaper and I have never doubted that he would not change his course the moment he gazed upon the handsome features of Anthony Eden. His is a conviction and faith that knows no turning. At any rate, two of Red

Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of articles on Egypt Ray Tucker will write from that country.

CAIRO—The Egyptian people and government are violently anti-Communist, notwithstanding their feud with England over the Suez Canal and their resentment of Truman's policy of extreme friendship to Israel.

Although this land of the Pharaohs stands at the bridgehead of three continents, and is a vital sector in the cold war, it has nothing much in the way of soldiers and weapons to back up its support of the West.

Egyptians are very friendly to the American people, which is true of most nations in the Middle East, even though they disagree with certain of the Truman and Eisenhower policies.

It is evident in the hotels, in the bazaars and on the streets. Bellhops, clerks and police officials ask, "Are you American?", and grin broadly when the reply is in the affirmative. It is surprising how many have visited "the States" or have relatives and friends there.

BARGAINING — The bargaining and sparring match between Egypt and Britain over the military control of the vital Suez Canal—a link between Britain and her erstwhile Empire—has ended, with U. S. Ambassador Jefferson Caffrey siding with

Prime Minister Churchill under specific orders from Washington.

Prior to the pact, agreed upon a week ago, Churchill professed to be alarmed over Egypt's recent purchase of $3 million worth of small arms from Spain, especially as they involved the type of guns and mortars peculiarly adapted to the guerrilla warfare which the natives have waged against the British in outlying posts along the Nile and the Mediterranean.

However, the Egyptian insisted they had bought the guns and mortars simply to strengthen their bargaining position vis-a-vis Britain. According to the agreement now entered into by the two nations, Britain will be able to maintain a great air and military base about 150 miles northeast of Cairo.

The British will have 20 months in which to withdraw their 30,000 troops, whose presence to the Egyptians of the anti-Farouk revolution—July, 1952—made their country seem like one that was occupied by a foreign power. The British will staff the area with technicians garbed as civilians. But they, and, of course, the Americans, will be permitted to move in and use this only great armament and repair center in the whole of the Middle East if Moscow or Peking should threaten to invade this territory.

According to the pact England may occupy the base for seven years. The Egyptians refer to the seven years as the "period of availability." However, the important thing is the reaching of an agreement to keep this area out of Reds' hands. Egypt would not be able to stop the Communists, but she is willing to furnish all possible assistance.

LESSON — Secretary Dulles and his worldwide diplomatic staff could, and probably have, derived useful information from this Suez Canal trading technique.

The Britishers' experience in this line explains why they were able to hold their empire together for so many years. American impetuosity, under Roosevelt and Truman, according to this viewpoint, helped to create political, economic and diplomatic chaos out here.

Asians, Orientals and South Americans—in fact, all the on-the-fence nations—do not like to be pushed, forced or prodded into doing anything, even when it is for their own good. They are a slow, leisurely, philosophic people.

Our airplane, for instance, arrived at the Cairo airport at 5:30 one morning after a grueling two-day-and-night trip via Shannon, Ireland, Paris, Rome and Athens. There was nothing we needed so much as a bath and fresh clothes. But our bags did not reach the Semiramis Hotel, five miles from the airport, until

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

WARM weather and sunshine bring with them the annoyance and, at times, even danger, of insect bites. These pests may cause economic loss, illness, and even death.

They transmit such diseases as malaria and typhus, and many lesser disturbances.

Common Insect Types

There are many types of insects that cause damage to man. These include spiders, ticks, mites, lice, fleas, flies, mosquitoes, bees, wasps, hornets, scorpions, as well as moths and caterpillars.

An insect bite injures the skin by the penetration of the bite or suck. However, the greatest reaction to the bite is caused by the ejection of the insect's salivary fluid. This may often contain toxic material, as with the bite of the black widow spider.

Victims Desensitized

Certain people, after prolonged exposure to insect bites, actually become desensitized or immune to them, due to being exposed to larger and larger doses.

While they were talking, one of the TV stars was singing. It was a sentimental love song, one that was currently popular. It struck a response in Cynthia's heart. Was there anything harder, she wondered, than waiting?

Sawdust Is Endorsed As Garden Mulch

A "waste product" of the timber industry is proving to be of great value to the gardener. Agricultural scientists have given their endorsement to the use of sawdust as mulch.

All mulching materials do at least three things: they hold moisture where it will do the most good; they keep the soil in place and loose and cool; and they discourage weed growth. Sawdust is superior in many respects because it is easy and clean to handle, it is free of weed seeds, it is generally available, and it is inexpensive.

Dry weather, with threats of even drier weather to come, makes this almost a life and death matter in commercial vegetable gardens, as well as for the vegetables, flowers and shrubs of the home-owner. Generous use of sawdust mulch conserves what moisture we get, and increases the productive capacity of the soil.

The head of the Department of Horticulture at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Professor Wesley P. Judkins, has been conducting intensive research into this subject and his reports not only dispel stubbornly held beliefs that sawdust is harmful, but stress its beneficial qualities.

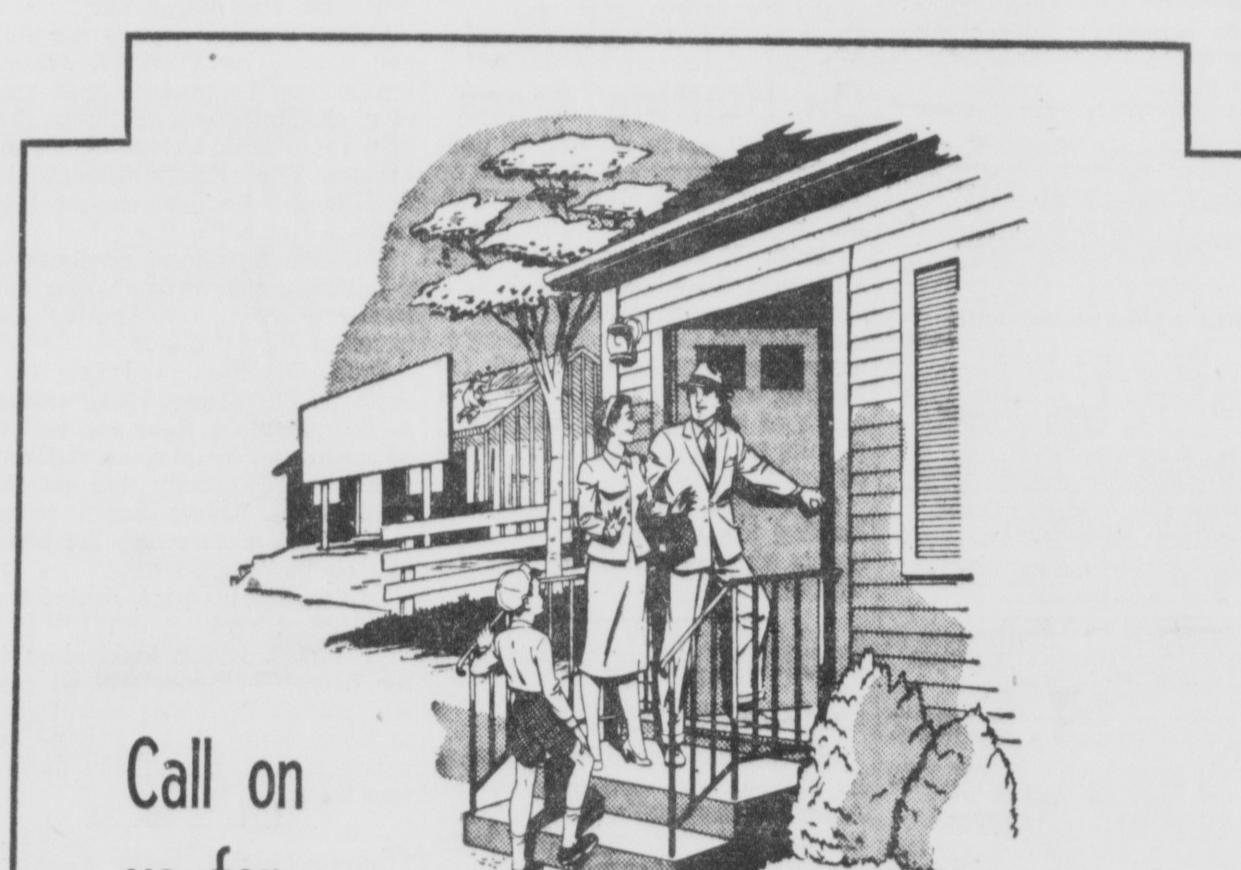

Dr. Freeman S. Howlett, Chairman of the Department of Horticulture, and Professor G. W. Volk, Chairman of the Department of Agronomy of Ohio State University both agree with this view.

Said Dr. Howlett: "Looking back over the years we wonder where and why the idea arose that sawdust mulch was not satisfactory. It is now evident that we should make up for lost time by using it whenever it is available, and where conditions are favorable for mulches. Under the arid conditions of Ohio, it should have extensive uses."

"If nitrogen is added to the sawdust," commented Professor Volk, "it would decompose into a good soil organic material . . . Plants will possibly make a better than normal growth in the absence of sawdust, because it will tend to loosen the soil."

A quick way to warm up leftover rice is to pour boiling water over it, cover, let stand several minutes and then drain. If you want the rice steaming hot, bring to a boil over high heat after it has stood in the hot water, but do not let it cook.

Want those deviled eggs you are planning to take to a picnic to taste particularly savory? Add finely grated onion, Worcestershire sauce and drained sweet pickle relish to the yolks when you mash them; season with salt and freshly-ground pepper and add just enough mayonnaise to give a good consistency.

Earrings Can Flatter Shape Of Your Face

Earrings have never been as popular as they are now. This is mainly because of the beautiful designs that are being offered. They are irresistible. Certainly they are a wonderful addition to a costume.

Earrings add interest to the face, giving it sparkle and animation. The eyes, especially, may be flattened by pendants of becoming material, design and color.

Facial contour must be considered when making a selection. Large, round button earrings add to the width and roundness of the face, frequently imparting a pleasing curve to the too-thin face. They unduly emphasize rotundity if a face is on the full side.

Those large hoops, that now seem to be the rage, will have the same effect as the close-fitting button type. They belong by rights to the woman of large proportions. On the cute little pint-size girl they are out of character.

Wide, decorative bracelets and necklaces that match earrings add a smart touch to an outfit.

Some earrings nearly reach the shoulders. The longer they are, the more they seem to shorten the neck.

The next regular Grange meeting will be held Aug. 13 in Washington Township school.

Sawdust Is Endorsed As Garden Mulch

A "waste product" of the timber industry is proving to be of great value to the gardener. Agricultural scientists have given their endorsement to the use of sawdust as mulch.

All mulching materials do at least three things: they hold moisture where it will do the most good; they keep the soil in place and loose and cool; and they discourage weed growth. Sawdust is superior in many respects because it is easy and clean to handle, it is free of seed weeds, it is generally available, and it is inexpensive.

Dry weather, with threats of even drier weather to come, makes this almost a life and death matter in commercial vegetable gardens, as well as for the vegetables, flowers and shrubs of the home-owner. Generous use of sawdust mulch conserves what moisture we get, and increases the productive capacity of the soil.

The head of the Department of Horticulture at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Professor Wesley P. Jenkins, has been conducting intensive research into this subject and his reports not only dispel stubborn beliefs that sawdust is harmful, but stress its beneficial qualities.

Dr. Freeman S. Howlett, Chairman of the Department of Horticulture, and Professor G. W. Volk, Chairman of the Department of Agronomy of Ohio State University both agree with this view.

Said Dr. Howlett: "Looking back over the years we wonder where and why the idea arose that sawdust mulch was not satisfactory. It is now evident that we should make up for lost time by using it whenever it is available, and where conditions are favorable for mulches. Under the arid conditions of Ohio, it should have extensive uses."

"If nitrogen is added to the sawdust," commented Professor Volk, "it would decompose into a good soil organic material . . . Plants will possibly make a better than normal growth in the absence of sawdust, because it will tend to loosen the soil."

A quick way to warm up leftover rice is to pour boiling water over it, cover, let stand several minutes and then drain. If you want the rice steaming hot, bring to a boil over high heat after it has stood in the hot water but do not let it cook.

Want those deviled eggs you are planning to take to a picnic to taste particularly savory? Add finely grated onion, Worcestershire sauce and drained sweet pickle relish to the yolks when you mash them; season with salt and freshly-ground pepper and add just enough mayonnaise to give a good consistency.

We mean it! Whether you're just going on a 4th of July outing or a two weeks vacation, enjoy yourself. Give your mind and body a holiday. Periodic rests and changes can go a long way toward keeping you healthy. If you feel too rundown to enjoy your vacation, by all means, see your doctor. When he prescribes remedial medicines, bring your prescriptions to us. We are ready to serve you at all times — happy to help you have a wonderful time, now and all year through.

Earrings Can Flatter Shape Of Your Face

Earrings have never been as popular as they are now. This is mainly because of the beautiful designs that are being offered. They are irresistible. Certainly they are a wonderful addition to a costume.

Earrings add interest to the face, giving it sparkle and animation. The eyes, especially, may be flattened by pendants of becoming material, design and color.

Facial contour must be considered when making a selection. Large, round button earrings add to the width and roundness of the face, frequently imparting a pleasing curve to the too-thin face. They unduly emphasize rotundity if a face is on the full side.

Those large hoops, that now seem to be the rage, will have the same effect as the close-fitting button type. They belong by rights to the woman of large proportions. On the cute little pint-size girl they are out of character.

Drop earrings help lengthen the face and are good for girls with round faces providing the earrings aren't too massive.

Even At Turn Of Century, Life Was Not Slow In Circleville

Old Newspaper Souvenir Tells Strange Doings

Southern Ohio Had Already Noted City Along The Scioto

As a driver for the local taxi company, Gaylord Greene stays in close touch every day with growing Circleville. But he also has a treasured keepsake that reflects the strange tempo of the times nearly a half-century back.

The souvenir is a July 26, 1902, issue of a Cincinnati newspaper, uncovered in some forgotten spot earlier this year when a building was razed to make room for the present taxi office and adjoining parking lot. Circleville news gets a fair share of attention in the yellowed, crumbling pages.

In fact, the community is mentioned as the "little city on the banks of the Scioto river" in connection with a love triangle story which apparently had the local public stirred in that distant day. But the big banner headline on the front page went to Jim Jeffries, "still champion of the heavies."

Jeffries and Bob Fitzsimmons had met the day before, in San Francisco, with the world's heavyweight crown at stake. And in the eighth round, Jeffries had knocked out his opponent. It was a "great battle for fame and fortune," the Cincinnati paper relates, and in due tribute a large picture of Jeffries—dressed like a head waiter—appears on page one.

ALONGSIDE THE story of the great fight is an item that tells how the victims of confidence men were forming their own organization in Illinois. A man who lost $5,000 in "a fake foot race" was named as a charter member.

At Terre Haute, a man was looking for the fellow who ran off with his wife. He said he wanted to sue him.

And at Marysville, O., an Ohioan who was "shot down by a bad Indian" never had a chance to defend himself. The paper said so.

An insane woman, one of the small headlines reported, "tried to brain her husband with chair" in Louisville, Ky.

Among the larger advertisements, a Cincinnati cigar distributor was kicking the daylights out of cheap cigar factories. Part of the vigorous appeal to the public denounces "a roll of straw . . . made to look like a cigar." Housewives were advised to "Don't tie the top of your jelly and preserve jars in the old fashioned way. Seal them by the new, quick, absolutely sure way" — paraffine wax!

A pair of Douglas shoes could be had for $3.50, and Zu-Zu Ginger Snaps were in demand for a hasty snack. Among the music lovers, you could attach The Pianola to an upright piano and "it gives you the ability to play upon that piano any composition ever written—all the things you like best, played as you think they should be."

AT WELLSVILLE, while the pastor was on vacation, the ladies of the church choir turned the parsonage into a hotel to help pay off the parish debt.

And at Gallipolis, a young man confessed to horse stealing after he was tricked into selling a horse and buggy to the sheriff. When finally told the sheriff himself had made the purchase, the youth was "greatly surprised and confessed: 'I stole the horse from my brother, who lives near Circleville.'"

Many strange cases had their be-

His job will be taken by John B. Warden, supervisor of agencies with headquarters in Roanoke.

Malnutrition Kills Wealthy Recluse

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP)—After John J. Panso, 75, died of malnutrition in St. Vincent's Hospital last night, police searched his basement flat.

They found a bankbook showing deposits totaling $6,000 and two uncashed income tax refund checks for 1952-1953 amounting to $200.

Even At Turn Of Century, Life Was Not Slow In Circleville

Old Newspaper Souvenir Tells Strange Doings

Southern Ohio Had Already Noted City Along The Scioto

As a driver for the local taxi company, Gaylord Greenlee stays in close touch every day with growing Circleville. But he also has a treasured keepsake that reflects the strange tempos of the times nearly a half-century back.

The souvenir is a July 26, 1902, issue of a Cincinnati newspaper, uncovered in some forgotten spot earlier this year when a building was razed to make room for the present taxi office and adjoining parking lot. Circleville news gets a fair share of attention in the yellowed, crumbling pages.

In fact, the community is mentioned as the "little city on the banks of the Scioto river" in connection with a love triangle story which apparently had the local public stirred in that distant day. But the big banner headline on the front page went to Jim Jeffries, "still champion of the heavies."

Jeffries and Bob Fitzsimmons had met the day before, in San Francisco, with the world's heavyweight crown at stake. And in the eighth round, Jeffries had knocked out his opponent. It was a "great battle for fame and fortune," the Cincinnati paper relates, and in due tribute a large picture of Jeffries—dressed like a head waiter—appears on page one.

ALONGSIDE THE story of the great fight is an item that tells how the victims of confidence men were forming their own organization in Illinois. A man who lost $5,000 in "a fake foot race" was named as a charter member.

At Terre Haute, a man was looking for the fellow who ran off with his wife. He said he wanted to sue him.

And at Marysville, O., an Ohioan who was "shot down by a bad Indian" never had a chance to defend himself. The paper said so.

An insane woman, one of the small headlines reported, "tried to brain her husband with a chair" in Louisville, Ky.

Among the larger advertisements, a Cincinnati cigar distributor was kicking the daylights out of cheap cigar factories. Part of the vigorous appeal to the public denounces "a roll of straw . . . made to look like a cigar."

Houswives were advised don't tie the top of your jelly and preserve jars in the old fashioned way. Seal them by the new, quick, absolutely sure way! — paraffine wax!

A pair of Douglas shoes could be had for $3.50, and Zu-Zu Ginger Snaps were in demand for a hasty snack. Among the music lovers, you could attach The Pianola to an upright piano and "it gives you the ability to play upon that piano any composition ever written—all the things you like best, played as you think they should be."

AT WELLSVILLE, while the pastor was on vacation, the ladies of the church choir turned the parsonage into a hotel to help pay off the parish debt.

And at Gallipolis, a young man confessed to horse stealing after he was tricked into selling a horse and buggy to the sheriff. When finally told the sheriff himself had made the purchase, the youth was "greatly surprised and confessed: 'I stole the horse from my brother, who lives near Circleville.'"
